

CAMBRIDGE STUDY CENTER PRESENTS

Islam, Christianity & Public Life

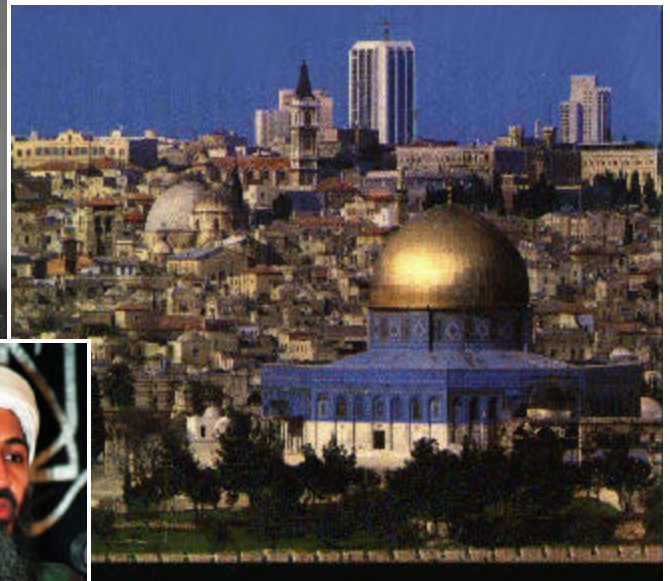

Saturday, February 1, 2003

9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Free to the Public

Lunch Break: Noon to 1:30.

A map to downtown restaurants will be provided for those from out of town.

with Dr. Lawrence Adams

Session Topics:

- Theological & worldview differences of Christianity & Islam
- Historical and contemporary conflict
- The question of law and authority
- War, jihad and terrorism
- World order and the future: Cooperation or conflict

Cambridge Study Center
541 South Florida Avenue
Lakeland, FL 33801

Phone: 863.686.4862

Website: www.cambridgestudycenter.org

Lawrence Adams is Visiting Scholar at the Center for Christian Study, and a member of the faculty at the Weldon Cooper Center for Public Service at the University of Virginia. After receiving his undergraduate degree at the University of Richmond, Adams served with InterVarsity Christian Fellowship as a campus staff member and Area Director. He earned a Ph.D. in Government from UVA in 1987. Adams is a former Research Director at the Institute on Religion and Democracy in Washington, D.C., has served on the staffs of two committees of the U.S. House of Representatives, and has taught at North Park College in Chicago and James Madison University. He is the author of works on religion and politics, U.S. foreign policy, and security policy, including Going Public: Christian Responsibility in a Divided America (Brazos Press/Baker, 2002).

